The Dream of Solitude

Sometimes

I dream of an evening

In a messy bed with pencils

That

Colors my whole world in a single page

I dream of an afternoon

Under a setting sun

Some laughing faces in the golden hour

A heart beating faster but full inside

I dream of a noon

A ringing bell, a chaotic corridor

Some boxes of food, sharing the world

And stories woven in the white snow hanging in the sky

I dream of a morning

Grey days passing the window

Trees moving behind

Some crinkled hands tossing me in the sky

Oh! To be bird and fly

I dream of a solitude

Where everything feels light

Like being carried from sofa to bed

Tucked in a blanket of love.
